1. INTRODUCTION

Transparency International Bangladesh (TIB), accredited chapter of Berlin-based Transparency International, is committed to the principles of gender equality and to creating a gender-sensitive working environment. TIB strives to ensure that its entire staff, interns, volunteers, members and other relevant stakeholders with whom TIB engages professionally are treated with dignity and respect and that they are able to work in an environment that is free from discrimination, harassment and abuse of any kind.

Protection from sexual harassment, and the right to work with dignity are universally recognised human rights as envisaged in different international human rights treaties and international labor standards such as, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights 1966 (ICESCR); the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women 1979 (CEDAW); and ILO's Discrimination (Employment and Occupation) Convention 1958 (Convention No. 111).

Bangladesh is Party to a number of international human rights instruments including the ICESCR and CEDAW, and to the Optional Protocol to CEDAW. Bangladesh has also been an active Member State of the International Labour Organisation (ILO) since 22 June 1972 and has ratified 33 ILO Conventions including seven fundamental conventions, and ILO Convention No. 111. Bangladesh has adopted the National Women Development Policy 2011, affirming its commitment to abide by different international instruments in an effort to protect and promote the rights of women in Bangladesh, and eliminate discrimination against women and girl children.

The Constitution of Bangladesh, explicitly provides for equality before the law, prohibits discrimination against any person on the grounds only of, among others, sex, and guarantees that women should have equal rights with men in all spheres of the State and of public life, and clearly states that the State can make special provision in favour of women or children or for the advancement of any "backward" section of citizens (Articles 27 and 28). The Constitution further ensures the right to enjoy the protection of the law, and to be treated in accordance with the law, and only in accordance with law, to every citizen and guarantees that no action detrimental to the life, liberty, body, reputation or property of any person shall be taken except in accordance with law (Articles 31 and 32).

National legislation has clear mechanisms to combat violence against women. In addition to provisions in the Penal Code 1860 and the Suppression of Repression against Women and Children Act, 2000 (as amended in 2003), there are guidelines on sexual harassment prescribed by the High Court Division of the Supreme Court. The Judicial Guidelines, which were given in BNWLA v Bangladesh and others in 2009 [14 BLC (HCD) 694] as modified in BNWLA v Bangladesh and others [BLD (HCD) 31], spell out ways to deal with sexual harassment at the workplace and in educational institutions.

TIB practices zero tolerance against violence against women in all its manifestations from both organisational and programmatic perspectives. TIB has robust provisions in its Gender Strategy, Code of Ethics and the Human Resource Manual that aim to ensure an enabling environment where all staff and relevant stakeholders of the organization shall work and interact with each other with utmost respect, decency and sensitivity.

Although anyone could be subjected to sexual harassment irrespective of age, sex, marital status, education or profession, TIB recognises that women are usually more vulnerable to such victimisation. Discrimination and harassment, including sexual harassment, are often accompanied by abuse of authority or misuse of power. Victims of sexual harassment are deterred from complaining when a person in a position of authority indulges in such acts for fear of backlash. This makes the situation more complex.

TIB will take necessary steps to put in place preventive and remedial measures to address workplace harassment. As part of this broader objective, TIB has formulated this Policy to enable staff and stakeholders to file complaints and seek redress in the event of any unfortunate incidence of this nature in a work-related situation.

2. SCOPE OF THE POLICY

This policy is called "TIB Policy on Sexual Harassment Complaint and Redress". Any staff or relevant stakeholder of TIB can invoke this Policy against another (or more than one) staff and/or relevant stakeholder(s) in the event the latter commits an act of sexual harassment in or outside the office premises during or in the course of employment/involvement with TIB.

The complainant and the accused can be of any gender. TIB encourages a spirit of openness in the workplace so that staff and relevant stakeholders feel confident in challenging unacceptable conduct and lodge complaints in the due process.

This Policy is not intended to impair or limit the right of any staff or relevant stakeholder seeking a remedy available under the law of the land. Proceedings under this Policy shall continue notwithstanding any proceedings initiated by a complainant against an alleged perpetrator under any law in force at the time.

3. SEXUAL HARASSMENT DEFINED

This Policy draws on the definition provided in the High Court Division Guidelines to signify Sexual Harassment. However, it is important to note that the acts described in the checklist below are not exhaustive.
